The Heights

Senator Kerry in the Lunch School Arts

This one's gonna go on, and on, and on.

"What's he going to do? What's he going to do?"

This one's gonna go on, and on, and on.

"What's he going to do? What's he going to do?"

What Kerry's character in the song "Blackstar" is all about. It's a chilling, apocalyptic vision of a world in which government leaders, corporations, and even everyday people are controlled and manipulated by powerful forces. The song's dark, brooding atmosphere and the repeating lyrics "What's he going to do? What's he going to do?" create a sense of unease and foreboding, reminding listeners of the fragility of our society and the potential for corruption and exploitation to become more prevalent.

Alison's victory, however, is a reminder that even in these dark times, there is hope and resilience. Despite the challenges, people will continue to fight for justice and truth, and band together to create a better future. As Alison's victory shows, we cannot give up on our ideals and values, and we must continue to strive for a world where everyone is treated with dignity and respect, where the powerful are held accountable, and where the voices of the marginalized and oppressed are heard.
